

Donate to AFA of Indiana and We'll Send you the Upcoming book:
The Unraveling of We The People

“Civics education has been hijacked into a political social action campaign for divisive liberal causes designed to destroy American culture. As we observe college demonstrations spill onto our streets, many wonder why so many young people are the core of such protests . . . David Lantz's The Unraveling of We the People has both answers and solutions. I encourage every patriotic parent and grandparent to read this important new book.”

Micah Clark, AFA of Indiana

For a donation of $25 or more, we will send you a copy of David's upcoming book, due out around Thanksgiving. To donate and reserve your copy, please go to www.afain.net/barton/

Micah Clark

David Lantz asks and answers these questions:

What were the original beliefs that facilitated the process we called the melting pot and caused a diversity of people groups to join together to become one nation, under God?

What has caused the demise of the melting pot approach to teaching civics education?

How did we come to question who we are as a people, and create instead groups of racial, cultural and ideological "tribes" all clamoring for, but never finding, equality?

How can we correct mistakes that have been made in the way we teach civics education?

How can conservatives form a grassroots movement that revives an American ethos in civics education,

What You'll Learn When You Read The Unraveling of We the People

How Progressive leaders in the early twentieth century sought to re-engineer American society by changing the scope of public education.

Why removing our Judeo-Christian heritage from being taught in the public schools was a necessary step for introducing the "New Civics" of public education.

How 60s radicals like Bill Ayres of the Weatherman Underground continue their counter-cultural revolutionary movement from inside the halls of America's leading colleges and universities.

How young people who have been raised on the "new civics" curriculum, are now being recruited by liberal organizations, funded by people like George Soros, to dominate the "Viral Loop" via social media videos and blog posts.

